Python alarms QC folks

By J. Hernandez

MANILA, Sept. 10 (PNA) — A group of Python programmers in the Philippines have been alerted to a security vulnerability in the Python 2.7.10 release. The vulnerability, known as CVE-2018-1000001, allows an attacker to execute arbitrary code with root privileges. The Python community has released a patch for the vulnerability, and users are urged to update their Python installations as soon as possible.

Copyright 2018

The vulnerability was discovered by a researcher from the University of California, Berkeley. The researcher reported the issue to the Python Security Response Team, who confirmed the vulnerability and coordinated the release of the patch. The vulnerability affects Python 2.7.10 and earlier versions. It is not present in Python 3.x or Python 2.7.11 and later versions.

The vulnerability is a buffer overflow in the Python interpreter. It occurs when the interpreter processes a certain type of input. The overflow causes the interpreter to write data to a memory location that it is not allowed to access. This can lead to a crash or the execution of arbitrary code.

Jumper rips ancient mark

Unheralded Dagmil crushes 68-year-old RP standard

By Steve Rogers

The 68-year-old Philippine standard for the high jump was shattered by a 2.01-meter leap by Dagmil, a 21-year-old Filipino athlete, at the 1992 Olympic Games in Barcelona.

The leap, which was not officially recorded, came during a practice session on the night of the final competition.

The leap was witnessed by several officials and spectators, but it was not until the next day that the feat was confirmed.

The leap was a surprise, as Dagmil had not been considered a serious contender for the gold medal.

The leap was a significant achievement, as it marked the first time a Filipino athlete had broken the long-standing Philippine record.

The leap was a testament to Dagmil's talent and hard work, and it inspired other Filipino athletes to strive for excellence.

The leap was a historic moment for the Philippines, and it will be remembered for years to come.

The leap was a source of pride for the Filipino people, and it showed the world that the Philippines has the potential to produce world-class athletes.

The leap was a testament to the spirit of the Olympic Games, and it showed that with hard work and determination, anything is possible.

Smith, D.D.S., a dentist in the Department of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at the University of California, San Francisco. "Your teeth are a reflection of your overall health, and if you're not taking care of them, you're not taking care of yourself."
